Coverage

How long will postpartum mothers be eligible for Medicaid after birth?

Mothers who received Medicaid-covered services during their pregnancy will be eligible for 12 months of postpartum coverage.

Will mothers need to reapply for Medicaid to benefit from the extended continuous eligibility?

No, Nebraska Medicaid will automatically check to see what mothers were enrolled in Medicaid or CHIP while pregnant and will extend their coverage on January 1, 2024, to ensure the mother can access the care she needs. This is true for mothers who lost Medicaid coverage before January 1, 2024, and are still not 12 months postpartum. If the mother is still a resident of Nebraska, her Medicaid coverage will once again be active.

How will these changes impact the services that are available?

These changes will ensure that eligible mothers have access to the healthcare they need for 12 months after they give birth.

What happens if a mother's income changes during her 12-month postpartum period?

The mother will maintain her Medicaid coverage for 12 months even if her life circumstances change. She may lose Medicaid coverage after the postpartum period if she no longer qualifies for Medicaid when a renewal is completed.
